OSAKA, JAPAN

EXPLORE THE CULINARY CAPITAL OF JAPAN

An important commercial centre since medieval times, Osaka and its castle played a major role in the history of Japan and its unification in the 16th century. Built in 1583, it towers above the city in the heart of a six-hectare park with ramparts and moats. However, the 5-storey, 8-inside-storey building you can visit today was completed... in 1997, the castle having been rebuilt many times.

But Osaka also stands out for another aspect: its gastronomy, which for some makes it the capital of taste in a country where the delicacy of dishes and the marriage of flavours have been elevated to the rank of a major art.

When it comes to Osaka cuisine, three key elements stand out: takoyaki, okonomiyaki and izakayas. The first two are eaten, while the third is where you can eat.

Let's start with takoyaki. These little balls, crispy on the outside and soft on the inside, contain pieces of tender octopus, green onion and other flavoursome ingredients. Cooked in special moulds, takoyaki are served hot and topped with mayonnaise, takoyaki sauce, dried bonito (katsuobushi) and seaweed.

Let's continue with okonomiyaki, also known as Japanese pizza. This thick pancake is made from a dough of flour, eggs and cabbage. You can add your choice of ingredients, such as prawns or squid, or pork or cheese: it all depends on your tastes, and okonomiyaki is a 100% customisable dish. Once cooked, okonomiyaki sauce, mayonnaise, dried bonito and seaweed are added for an incomparable explosion of flavour.

These two local specialities can be enjoyed in another essential component of Osaka's culinary scene: izakayas, small informal bars and restaurants found all over the city. As well as takoyaki and okonomiyaki, they also serve sashimi, yakitori (grilled kebabs) and tempura (fried fritters), among other Japanese delicacies.

TENJINBASHI-SUJI SHOPPING STREET

Tenjinbashi-suji Shopping Street claims to be the longest in Japan. The covered arcade stretches more than two kilometers, starting approximately from Tenjinbashi-suji Rokuchoe Subway Station and leading south until close to the Tenjinbashi Bridge. Locals shop for goods such as groceries, clothes, shoes, books, medicine, snacks and sundries. Prices for fashion products are relatively low in return for average quality. There are also many eateries and cafes.

HAND WASHING & HAND SANITIZING

Keeping hands clean through improved hand hygiene is one of the most important steps we can take to avoid getting sick and spreading germs to others. Many diseases and conditions are spread by not washing hands with soap and clean, running water. Alcohol-based hand sanitizers can quickly reduce the number of germs on hands.

ALL ABOARD
