AMSTERDAM, NETHERLANDS

The city of crooked houses

If Amsterdam, its canals, its bridges and its undeniable charm are here today, we have the henchmen of Florent V, Count of Holland, to thank. It was the abuses of these men that sealed Amsterdam's fate. Here's how it happened. We are in the 13th century, in a small fishing village wedged between a dam, a small coastal river, the Amstel, and marshes. This hamlet is 'visited' by the soldiers of the Count of Holland. Their behaviour towards the population and their property was so unacceptable that Florent V, to make amends, signed a tax exemption on 27 October 1275, which sealed the fate of the town for good. Thanks to this document, the "Tolprivilege van Amsterdam", the inhabitants could now travel and move their goods without paying taxes. Naturally, thanks to this enormous privilege on foreign trade, the modest fishing village became a city in just a quarter of a century, an important commercial centre in a century and then a world capital.

But let's not forget that Amsterdam, built below sea level, rests on marshland. And when it came to building in a wetland, the city's ever-growing population soon realised that the only way to prevent the buildings sinking was to build them on stilts. Stilts at least 18 metres long, allowing them to pass under the layer of peat and clay to reach the more stable sand. A traditional dwelling rests on ten of them, and all the buildings in the city are supported by some 11 million poles. This is one of the reasons why Amsterdam is home to the narrowest house in the world, with a facade just 1 metre wide. That and a tax dating back to the 17th century that taxed buildings on their width...

HAND WASHING & HAND SANITIZING

Keeping hands clean through improved hand hygiene is one of the most important steps we can take to avoid getting sick and spreading germs to others. Many diseases and conditions are spread by not washing hands with soap and clean running water. Alcohol-based hand sanitizers can quickly reduce the number of germs on hands. Please use the hand sanitizers situated at the entrance door of the dining outlets and various locations around the ship.
