STOCKHOLM, SWEDEN

Welcome to the land of Nobel Prizes!

We all have heard of the Nobel Prizes, but did you know that their roots are firmly planted in Sweden? Our tale begins in Stockholm, on October 21, 1833, with the birth of a boy named Alfred, son of Karolina Andriette Ahlsell and Immanuel Nobel. With lineage tracing back to the renowned 17th-century Swedish scientist Olof Rudbeck and numerous engineers in the family, Alfred was destined for a scientific lineage, yet he harbored a deep love for literature.

After completing his education in the United States and France, Alfred began exploring explosives in 1862 with his father, who had founded a marine mining company. In 1865, as serendipity would have it, he discovered that by mixing unstable nitroglycerin with an inert solid, it required a detonator to explode, making it far safer and easier to transport. Dynamite was born and duly patented, changing the course of industrial history. Alfred's wealth was now secured, but his passion for discovery remained undimmed.

His life took a dramatic turn when a French newspaper erroneously published his obituary, labelling him as the "merchant of death". Stunned by the portrayal, Alfred decided to leave a better legacy.

The first Nobel Prizes were awarded in Stockholm in 1901, five years after Alfred's death. Every year since, on December 10, these awards are presented by the King of Sweden, with the exception of the Peace Prize. This particular prize is presented by the King of Norway because, up until 1905, both countries shared the same king and divided the prizes between themselves after they separated.

SHOPPING AND CUISINE

Drottninggatan, a vibrant pedestrian street in the heart of the city. It's known for its mix of large chain stores, boutique shops, and international brands, offering a diverse shopping experience.

"Fika", most famous Swedish tradition, the delightful custom of enjoying a coffee and a treat with friends. Under Kastanjen translates to "Under the Chestnut Tree," is located in Gamla Stan, Stockholm's Old Town. It's tucked away from the busy main streets and faces Brända Tomten, a small public square. Centuries-old buildings line this square, and fika-goers.
