ST. JOHN'S, NEWFOUNDLAND

North America's oldest and most historically engaging places

Colorful, white-trimmed buildings splash a haze of bright beauty across the spectacular Newfoundland coastline of St. John's. Picturesque, steep streets roll down to the seafront, and the charming architecture contrasts beautifully against the wild and rugged shoreline, with redolent pine forests spreading out behind. The province's capital, St. John's, is a lively outpost - and one of North America's oldest and most historically engaging places. A rich trading history of haggling and hawking has played out on these animated, historic streets - especially Water Street, which is one of North America's oldest. St. John's boasts incredible history, as the launch point for daring transatlantic voyages, and a leap of human ingenuity is celebrated on Signal Hill. It was here where the first transatlantic transmission was received in 1901. Rise up to receive stunning views of the Atlantic, and the city spreading around the harbor from the fortified Cabot Tower. Rugged hiking trails and puffin-nesting cliffs add extra character to this remarkable island. The twin bell towers of the Basilica of St. John the Baptist are a St. John's landmark, and a National Historic Site dedicated to the city's namesake saint. The Quidi Vidi fishing village is an arresting stop, inhabited by busy artisans and local craft brewers - who produce characterful beers befitting this exuberant city of bold colors. George Street is the perfect spot to try a glass or two - the street is said to have the most bars per person of anywhere in Canada.

SIGHTS

- Signal Hill
- Jellybean Row
- The Rooms
- St. John's Harbour
- Cape Spear Lighthouse

CUISINE

St. John's, Newfoundland, boasts a unique cuisine shaped by its coastal location and cultural heritage. Traditional dishes like fish and brewis (salted cod, scrunchions, and hard bread) and Jiggs dinner (boiled salt beef, cabbage, carrots, turnips, and potatoes) are staples. Fresh seafood, particularly mussels and cod, feature prominently, while bakeapple pie, made with cloudberries native to the region, is a sweet treat. The province's maritime history and cultural influences have crafted a distinct culinary identity that's both hearty and flavorful.
