RAN-C- Snorkelling at the Natural Aquarium - Highlights Experiences $149

Rangiroa's turquoise lagoon is more like a vast inland sea, with the dry land forming a narrow chain of sandy motus that encircle this huge waterway. The marine life in the lagoon is some of the most spectacular anywhere. Please note: This tour is recommended only to guests who are physically fit and able to swim. Although only a minimal amount of walking is required, guests must be able to manoeuvre in and out of the snorkel boat using a 2-step ladder.

FAKARAVA, FRENCH POLYNESIA

A UNESCO Biosphere Atoll of Reefs, Passes, and Polynesian History

Fakarava is oblong-shaped and has an almost continuous string of reef and motu stretching for 40 km (25 mi) on its eastern edge. It's the second largest of the Tuamotu atolls, located 450 km (280 miles) northeast of Tahiti and 120 km (75 miles) southeast of Rangiroa. It's renowned for the drift diving in its two passes - Garuae (also spelled Ngarue) in the north near the main town of Rotoava (and the airport) and Tamakohua Pass, 48 km (30 mi) across the lagoon in the south. The tiny village of Tetamanu, situated by the southern pass, was once the capital of the Tuamotus and houses the first church built in the archipelago in 1874. In 2006 the entire atoll was deemed a UNESCO biosphere reserve; to preserve the lagoon no overwater bungalows have been built in it. Fakarava was "discovered" by Russian explorer Fabian Gottlieb Von Bellingshausen in 1820; some 20 years later missionaries arrived, in the guise of fanatical Catholic priest Honore Laval, and began building churches.
